WE STILL HAVE LEFT ABOUT

5000 Barrels of Old Wheat Flour

New winter wheat is coming in very damp, and the flour made from it is very unsatisfactory, up to the present time. New spring wheat will not be suitable for grinding before September 15th, and be placed on the New England market about October 5th.

Old wheat will make more bread per barrel, because it absorbs more liquid.

Ask your grocer for some of the flour that is stored in our warehouse.

THE GREAT ADVENTURE.

Those of us who are still young, or in iddle life, who still feel the pulse of life eat strongly, still rejoice in all of the vigor of a man's prime, when we chance upon an old man, upwards of 70, perhaps 80 years, apparently serene, contented and happy, and, realizing that for him the summons must soon come, frequently wonder with what feelings such a man must regard the immediate future with its certainty of an abrupt end. We may find enlightenment and inspiration in the words of just such a man, the venerable Lyman Abbott, 80 years old, editor of The Ontlook, who has just concluded a series of reminiscences of his long and useful life It is thus this octogenarian calmly faces

When the time comes for my embarkation, and the ropes are east off, and I put out to sea, I think I shall still be standing in the bow and still looking torward with eager curiosity and glad hopefulness to the new world to which the unknown voyage will bring me."

Vermont marble won a victory in Bo ton yesterday, when the executive council took up the subject of stone to be used in suilding the westerly wing of the state suse. An argument was made for marle quarried in Lee on the ground that a reference should be shown for a home tate product, but the state house building ommission affirmed that the Vermont earble was not only cheaper than the Lee marble, but that the latter would not harmonize with the remainder of the new construction, in all of which Vermont marble has been used. The council voted 8 to 2 their approval of the contract to the Vermont company calling for an expenditure of $304,750.
